LOCKDOWN

How might we use technology to design an innovative, privacy-conscious solution that enables youth workers to efficiently identify and prioritize Instagram Stories or other social media posts that may indicate emotional distress — without violating platform policies or compromising user trust.

YOUTH CENTRE

Youth workers currently browse Instagram Stories as part of digital outreach, using them as entry points to check in with youths who may be experiencing distress. However, Instagram Stories are time-limited and disappear after 24 hours, making it challenging to identify and respond to concerns in a timely manner.

An earlier pilot that attempted to use sentiment analysis to flag posts expressing high levels of anxiety, sadness, or anger was unsuccessful, as Instagram classified the downloading of posts for analysis as a phishing-related activity.
